Tenor, born in Mexico City, after winning the 'Enrico Caruso' Competition in Milan, Ramón Vargas moved to Austria, where he completed his studies at the school of the Wiener Staatsoper with Leo Müller, and then in Milan with Rodolfo Celletti.

In 1992 he made his debut at the Metropolitan Opera in New York as Edgardo in Lucia di Lammermoor, replacing Luciano Pavarotti. This was followed by his debut on the stage of the Teatro alla Scala in 1993 as Fenton in Strehler's new production for the centenary of Falstaff, conducted by Riccardo Muti. He regularly performs at all the major opera houses in the world, such as the Royal Opera House in London, the Staatsoper in Berlin, the Paris Opéra, the Liceu in Barcelona and many others.

His most recent performances include Giovanna d'Arco in Mexico City, Norma in Japan, Carmen in Graz, I lombardi alla prima crociata at the Opéra Royal de Wallonie, and Simon Boccanegra in Hamburg.
